The Military Religious Freedom Foundation and America's New Holy War

Weinstein is an interesting character. He is a graduate of the Air Force academy himself (1977) and while agnostic, still prays in Hebrew daily (3 times a day to be exact) and celebrates traditions from his Jewish heritage. He went on to be a JAG lawyer in the Air Force and also worked in the Reagan White House as a lawyer. He left public service to work for Ross Perot (remember him?) and Perot industries. He now lives out west in New Mexico where he works daily on defending the civil rights of sailors, airmen, soldiers, and marines.

The Military Religious Freedom Foundation has served 71,000 people, 95% of whom are Christian. The other 5% are people of other faiths. 3/4 of MRFF's clients are protestant of various dominations and the other 1/4 of the Christian clients are Roman Catholic. They are endorsed by the California Council of Churches Impact organization. Their core mission is to fight a truly massive proselytizing corporate parachurch complex. They don't always fight evangelicals, they did have to fight a militant atheist once but 99% of the problem is this new brand of militarized Christianity. But the case of the militant atheist doesn't get the press that the cases against dominionists get. Pat Robertson and Fox News aren't going to cover that sort of thing.

MRFF works daily to protect members of the military from religious persecution but a few incidences stand out and demonstrate the religious culture that has become pervasive in the military, particularly in the Air Force. Franklin Graham, son of the evangelist Billy Graham was invited to speak at the Pentagon with an event organized at tax payer's expense. For an organization that should represent no religion, this sort of thing goes on regularly. Franklin Graham is openly against abortion and homosexuality. However, in this instance, it was comments about Islam that led MRFF to lead the charge in getting him canceled from the event. When Muslim soldiers are in the military someone who comments that, "True Islam cannot be practiced in this country, You can't beat your wife. You cannot murder your children if you think they've committed adultery or something like that, which they do practice in these other countries." It wasn't an off-hand comment either, it was on CNN.

Dominionist ideology is extending to military hardware. The dominionist desire for violence and their obsession with weapons has already infiltrated the armed forces. This sort of holy war, that they want to start, can only be waged with weapons and preferably the most powerful and well-financed weapons of war available. Who has those weapons? The United States Military of course. Two things stand out that show that this agenda has already been underway: Jesus nukes and Jesus rifles.

According to Mr. Weinstein, he firmly believes that it is not outside the realm of possibility that dominionists within the military could very well start a nuclear war to advance their endtime agenda. Until recently, and for the past 20 years, nuclear weapons officers training at Vandenberg Airforce Base in California were shown a presentation on the ethics of nuclear war. On the surface this might seem like a good idea however the presentation was so steeped in evangelical religion that officers jokingly referred to it as the "Jesus loves nukes presentation." ...

It's not just nuclear weapons training where this is going on, it already happening on battle fields around the world. Trijicon, the chick-fil-a of defense contractors, was caught shipping scopes for rifles with Bible verse inscribed on the metal near the serial number. These scopes were shipped to the US Military and even the Israeli Defense Force. Elders in Afghanistan were incensed that our troops were in their country to start with but now they were shooting the enemy with essentially religious equipment. Once again, these covert actions reinforce a holy war narrative at the US tax payer expense.

The focus of MRFF and the focus of the politically-minded must be the same: to fight for secular civil liberties more than ever before. We cannot take our secular society for granted. It is something that must be assiduously defended at all times. Anytime anyone tries to push their beliefs onto others without their consent and especially within the government sphere, we need to counter-attack. The Department of Defense must also be brought back to proper civilian control and be reminded that they too are a government entity and must abide by the secular rules that should rule our entire society. This will take time and it will take effort but thanks to organizations like the Military Religious Freedom Foundation, defending secularism is possible. Perhaps Biden was right: we are fighting for the soul of America.

"Accept Christ or burn"

Attention Mr. Weinstein and the MRFF parasites: I see that you and your anti-Christian leftist organization is polluting the pages of Stars and Stripes now.

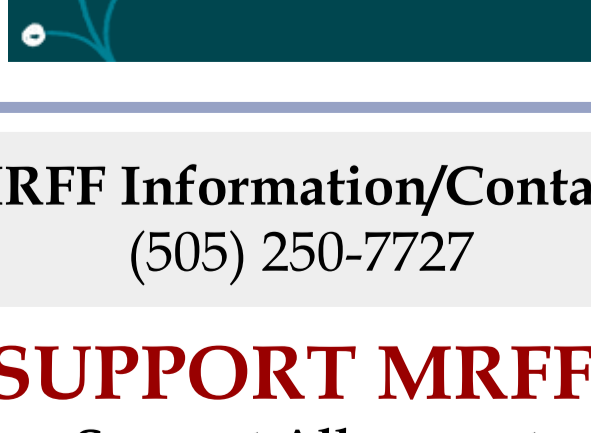

I just wanted to remind you Mickey and your vermin followers at the jew front group MRFF that you will all be immediately consigned to hell after you die where you will burn for all time unless you accept Jesus The Christ before you perish.

Jesus died for your evil sins and there is but One Way to avoid the flames of hell and that is by surrendering to Jesus. Change your satanic ways of trying to destroy Christianity in our military. Obama may have loved you but President Trump will end your rain of terror.
